

Educator Micro-credentials

Micro-credentials provide teachers with the opportunity to gain recognition for skills they master throughout their careers. As an emerging professional development strategy, educator micro-credentialing can enable our education system to continuously identify, capture, recognize, and share the best practices of America's educators so all teachers can hone their skills and identify and learn new ones.

Digital Promise Professional Services supports schools with implementing the use of micro-credentials to create personalized professional learning opportunities that are competency-based and on-demand. We work with leadership to identify and address a specific challenge or need and select appropriate micro-credentials. Additionally, we work with organizations to support the development of new micro-credentials.

How We Engage

We will help you develop a custom plan to meet the professional learning needs of your district.

Solution

Description

On-site strategic planning

Work with a team of administrators and/or lead teachers to gain a deeper understanding of micro-credentials, create a long-range plan and ensure it complements district goals, and develop a plan for implementation.

On-site workshops

Participants will:

- Develop an understanding of the micro-credential concept and ecosystem
- Select micro-credentials
- Collaborate with peers who selected the same micro-credential
- Plan for classroom practice and evidence collection

Institutes

Two to three day hands-on, collaborative and immersive experiences

On-site implementation support

Work with teachers on-site to plan and support classroom practice and collect evidence through:

- Classroom coaching
- One-on-one sessions
- Group meetings
- Model lessons

Ongoing virtual support

Provide ongoing immediate, focused, customized support to fit teachers' needs via video conferencing, email, phone, etc.

Collect and provide educator feedback on the micro-credentials experience to school and district administration.
