Is It Art?

The Art of Self Expression

Claim and Focus

A clear, specific claim is stated in the introduction of this essay ("Graffiti is art because it encourages artistic planning, can create jobs, and is becoming more accepted"). The essay stays focused on the topic and thoroughly develops the claim throughout.

Support and Evidence

The most relevant and appropriate evidence is quoted from multiple sources (Aaron Rose, Banksy) and clearly supports the claim. A full understanding of the topic and sources is demonstrated.

Organization

This essay has a strong organizational structure that includes an introduction, body paragraphs, and a conclusion. Clear transitions develop the connections between and among ideas ("First of all," "Furthermore," "Another example"). A strong introduction and conclusion help to support a logical progression of ideas.

Language and Style

The essay maintains a formal style throughout the essay, utilizing varied sentence structure to enhance the argument. Language is precise and appropriate for the topic ("self-expression," "creative elements," "showcasing"). The essay attends to conventions of the discipline while fully engaging the reader.

Using Exemplars in Your Lessons

Exemplar essays are tools to take abstract descriptions and make them more concrete for students. One way to use them is to print the clean copies of the essays and allow students to use the rubric to make notes or even find examples of important elements of an essay - thesis statements, introductions, evidence, conclusions, transitions, etc. Teachers can also use exemplars to illustrate what each score point within a trait 'looks like' in an authentic student essay. Is It Art?

Notes

Art is the definition of self-expression, individuality, and creativity. When most people think of graffiti they think of "tags" of someone's name or scribbles of letters on a wall, but when I think of graffiti I think of big, beautiful, multi-colored works of art that took weeks of preparation and planning. Graffiti should not be treated as an annoyance of a major kind. Graffiti is art because it encourages artistic planning, can create jobs, and is becoming more accepted.

First of all, in the article "Graffiti as Art", the text states, "the manner in which graffiti art is executed is the only obstacle it faces in being considered an art form." On paragraph 3 of the article also used above, it states, "However, larger pieces require planning and imagination and contain artistic elements like color and composition." This proves that anything that requires planning and creative elements should be seen as art. There is a lot of time and effort that goes into many pieces of graffiti, and that should be taken into consideration when deciding if something is art.

Next, many graffiti artists have been, and can be, discovered through these unbelievable murals they create. They also have an opportunity to be employed to do legal art work for others. By them knowing how to do this, they can have a future ahead of them. On CBS News, a museum curator named Aaron Rose stated, "Part of our goal with this exhibition was to kind of, maybe steer, young graffiti artists away from doing illegal work, and getting more excited about the fact that they could possibly have a real career in this." Several graffiti artists have been discovered by doing graffiti illegally. The famous graffiti artist Banksy sells his art to celebrities like Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, so clearly doing art is his full-time job. This is a positive part to graffiti that often goes unnoticed.

Furthermore, graffiti is becoming more common in art galleries. In Los Angeles, the Museum of Contemporary Art in LA is trying to change people's opinions of graffiti. This museum is showcasing graffiti artists. Another example is "One of the most famous graffiti artists, Banksy, has had his work shown in galleries such as Sotheby's in London." This allows those who normally have a bad opinion on graffiti to see it in a different light. Graffiti is becoming more modern and accepted and will continue to do so in the future.

In conclusion, the positives of graffiti outweigh the negatives. Graffiti is a great way to express oneself, and can be beneficial to those with talent. Since graffiti is now included in museums and it's a way to make a living, it should be considered art.
